Tribeca 2012: Exclusive Poster Debut for Travis Fine's 'Any Day Now'

Exclusive By Kate Erbland on April 25, 2012 | Be the First To Comment

Inspired by an moving true story, Travis Fine's Any Day Now may be set in the '70s, but the story's elements feel like a story ripped from today's headlines. The film stars Alan Cumming and Garret Dillahunt as Rudy and Paul, a happy (though closeted) couple who discover something truly unexpected in their neighbor's apartment - teen Marco (Isaac Leyva), abandoned by his drug-addicted mother and left to his own devices. Even worse? Marco has Down syndrome, and no one else in his life is able or equipped to handle his needs. Except Rudy and Paul. The pair eventually take in Marco and begin to form a happy and stable family together. But when their arrangement is discovered, and Rudy and Paul's relationship is outed, it kicks of a legal battle that will decide just who Marco really belongs with.

With a compelling story and an extremely talented cast (that also includes Frances Fisher), Any Day Now should emerge as one of the highlights of this year's Tribeca Film Festival. After the break, check out the exclusive poster debut for Any Day Now, along with a batch of new stills from the film.

The film will premiere on Thursday, April 26 9:30PM, with additional screenings on Friday, April 27 at 6:00PM and Saturday, April 28 at 6:00PM.
